

Laughing at Evolution

Edward F Blick, PhD

01/17/06

We all love to laugh, it's good medicine. We laughed at the Queen in Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland", who said "I sometimes believe in six impossible things before breakfast." The Darwinists are even more hilarious, they not only believe, but also teach more than six impossible fairy tales in their biology classes. The history of their pathetic attempt to pump life into the Lenin-like corpse of evolution is full of laughs. Let's peel back the skin of this rotten baloney and laugh at how this sausage was made.

Charles Darwin was born into wealth, spent two years in medical school, dropping out after spending too much time in bars. He had some divinity training but failed to make it as an Anglican minister. He was never a scientist but took a position as a naturalist on a ship and later wrote his racist books, "The Origin of the Species and the Preservation of Favored Races" and "Descent of Man". He was ignorant of genetics. He married his first cousin. All seven of his children either died young or had mental or physical disorders.

Without any facts, he conjured up his Pangenesis theory. He assumed that species changed to other species because all cells produced gemmules. Gemmules supposedly arose by some kind of reaction to the environment. Each of these gemmules entered the sex cells of the sperm or egg (it must have been crowded in there), which later were transmitted to the offspring. Big problem! No one could find Darwin's imaginary Gemmules and Pangenesis died shortly after birth!

In 1870, Adam Sedgewick, leading geologist of England, wrote Darwin: "I read your book with more pain than pleasure. Parts I laughed at till my sides were sore; others I read with absolute sorrow, because I think them utterly false ---- you deserted the true method of induction". Induction is reasoning from facts to theory, but Darwin reasoned from theory to facts, but neither he nor anyone else could find the facts! His writings were conjecture piled upon conjecture. "Maybe" and "Perhaps" form the basis of his books!

Darwin's writings were not science but philosophical musings. But something had to be done to keep the world believing Darwinism. In 1874, future Nazi-like preacher Ernest Haeckel published fake drawings of embryos, which he claimed indicated "fish to reptile to mammal" evolution. Later that year, fellow German embryologists Wilhelm His, Sr. exposed the hoax in detail in his book, Unsere Korperform. His scholarly books are considered the foundation of modern embryology. For the past century, other embryologists have denounced Haeckel's drawings as utter foolishness. "The theory of recapitulation ...should be defunct today." Stephen J Gould, (1980. Believe it or not, Haeckel's "Most Famous Fakes in Biology" are still used as proofs of evolution in biology books today! Don't school boards ever read those books? His forgeries are like a STD, a gift that keeps on giving!

In the meantime Darwin had returned to Lamarck's previously discarded idea, that giraffes developed long necks by stretching for the tree leaves on the top. This theory died again in 1883, when German biologist Leopold Weisman cut off the tails of white mice in 19 successive generations and the tails always reappeared. Similarly, after 4000 years of circumcision, Jewish men still had foreskins. More bad news for poor old Saint Darwin!

The next "batter up", was world famous geneticist Richard Goldschmidt, who attempted to come to the rescue of the embarrassed Darwinians by attempting to prove macroevolution was caused by mutations. For twenty-five years he was the godfather to millions of generations of gypsy moths. He zapped them with x-rays and chemicals. He found mutations produced nothing but deformities. No new species! He concluded rats were still rats and rabbits were still rabbits. In his 1940 book, "The Material Basis for Evolution", Goldschmidt exploded the ammunition box of evolutionary theory, and tore it to pieces. No one knew how to answer him and they cannot answer him today. He was an honest atheist who faced the facts. But not wanting to acknowledge God, he proposed a new mechanism of evolution called "The Hopeful Monster Mechanism". One day an alligator laid an egg and a turkey hatched out! You've got to remember boys and girls this is science!

For the next 30 years evolutionists were dazed and in turmoil because they had, 1) no proof that evolution had ever occurred, 2) no reasonable mechanism to explain evolution, and 3) zillions of missing links! They had bitter arguments among themselves about possible theories. The embarrassment of Goldschmidt's crude "Hopeful Monster Mechanism" caused Harvard's Stephen Gould in 1972 and a little later, Steven Stanley, of Johns Hopkins University, to "smarten it up" with some "evol-bable" names. Gould with some hand waving, rechristened Goldschmidt's ugly theory, "Punctuated Equilibrium". Stanley upped the ante with an even better "high-fallutin" scientific name, "Quantum Speciation" But it was still a monster by any name.

In the 1950's Francis Crick and James Watson unlocked the code of DNA, which crushed the hopes of Darwinists. It provided clear evidence that every species is locked into its own coding pattern. Only variation within a kind (microevolution) can occur. Mathematicians showed the odds against forming DNA by chance were "quad-zillions and quad-zillions to one". Evolution by chance was impossible! But atheist Crick was not ready to believe in God. He dreamed up a new theory? Some unknown "space alien" sprinkled sperm in our solar system and eventually creatures evolved on some planet (Krypton?). Then these "evolved space creatures" built a "Noahs Ark" rocket ship and after a long journey, zoomed down to the earth, to unloaded our great-great.... grandpa and the entire zoo. Crick named his new theory "Panspermia." This boys and girls is called science or..... maybe a fairy tale! Now NASA's "Life in Space Program" believes this baloney and is spending billions of our tax dollars shooting up probes in our solar system looking for this "sperm donor"!

There you have it, the skeletons in Evolution's closet! None were proven. They make good fodder for fairy tale writers. They are a barrel of laughs!

The history of evolution has been one of failed theories and then misrepresentations aimed at adulation of Darwin and debunking his opponents. It is really a cult religion. They've emptied out the stables and dumped it on the gullible public. Since they've not been able to prove evolution scientifically, they enlisted the help of the ACLU to have the courts declare it science and legal to teach in school. God is told to "Stay Out"!

Darwinists have given up public debates because they've lost hundreds of them in the 1970s and 80s. Why did they lose? As a participant in two of them I will tell you. They lost because they had no proof of macroevolution. Amazing! No Proof! They usually tried the old debate tricks of personal attacks on their opponents, i.e. "you can't be a scientist because you believe the Bible", etc. But they lost because audiences were shocked. Shocked that the Darwinists had no proof! And they have none today!

Not only are the Darwinians fighting the creationists, but also they are also fight with each other over their different theories. "So heated is the debate that one Darwinian says there are times when he thinks about going into a field with more intellectual honesty, the used car business." ("Science Contra Darwin" by Sharon Begley, Newsweek, April 8, 1985, p. 80)

"I suppose that nobody will deny that it is a great misfortune if an entire branch of science becomes addicted to a false theory. But this is what has happened in biology....I believe that one day the Darwinian myth will be ranked as the greatest deceit in the history of science." Soren Lovtrup, "The Refutation of a Myth", Routledge, Kegan, Paul Pub, 1987

Edward F Blick, PhD
Emeritus Professor of Engineering
Univ. of Oklahoma